As Leaders Go

John Diefenbaker has refused to announce has in effect been made for him by the people of Canada. A year or so ago the public waited each week for word from the Conservative Party leader as to his intentions regarding the future. His utterances were examined for clues to his possible plans to try to retain the leadership, or for indications that he would be content to retire.

Today that situation has changed. There is little if any public curiosity as to Mr. Diefenbaker's intentions. Despite a phalanx of true-blue supporters within his own party, the people of Canada have already tacitly voted Mr. Diefenbaker into retirement.

The main thought in this regard, indeed, is not "will he go" but "will he go voluntarily and with dignity." Even his opponents wish that, for Mr. Diefenbaker had become an institution in Canada, and some institutions deserve respect even in the act of being discarded.

Today, with half a dozen of his party seniors actively manoeuvring to win his position as leader, Mr. Diefenbaker could seek extension of his term merely as one of a group and with the very imminent danger that he would be submerged in that group when the party convention ballots were counted.

The aging Tory chieftain de-

THE DECISION WHICH MR. serves a better fate than that—but he is now running the risk of diminishing his stature by his delay in declaring his intention to retire. In justice to himself he should make it abundantly clear that he retires voluntarily; he should avoid at all cost any appearance of being hustled off the stage to cry his last lines from the wings.

> There is much talk today of the important voice of youth in our political affairs, and references to the estimate that by, say, 1969, 57 per cent of the Canadian population will be under 30 years of age. Such quotations do not stress that only persons over 21 will have a federal vote, and that a sizable portion of the under-thirties will be of an age when they cannot even talk or write. But even with such reservations, there can be little doubt that younger citizens will be increasingly heard from. Among this category, Mr. Diefenbaker must represent something from a by-gone age: he must increasingly be identified with an era that has passed away with its two great wars, its depression and its primitive efforts at a breakthrough into the nuclear-and-space

Under such circumstances, Mr. Diefenbaker's early acceptance of the role of elder statesman-former statesman-must be a matter of both self-interest and historical appropriateness. But he is an unconscionable time deciding.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT construction of a Family and Children's Courthouse will begin almost immediately, culminates many years of talk and many months of planning. To be located in what has now become a welfare precinct, on Cook Street at Pembroke, the new building will correct what have long been entirely inadequate conditions.

From crowded quarters in the city welfare building to equally unsuitable accommodation in an old dwelling on Coldharbor Road, the juvenile court worked under intolerable handicaps. The quarters were lacking in the dignity which should inspire respect for the court and its proceedings, there was insufficient room for family and witnesses, and no proper conference rooms. An atmosphere of makeshift and crowding detracted from the pi on youth appearing before the under regional organization.

Beyond the Humiliation

RE-ASSESSMENT BY THE Arabs of the bellicose propaganda their media blared forth at the outset of Middle East fighting will go further than an expression of embarrassment following their humiliating military defeat.

Mr. Nasser and his allies have realized that the very violence of their threats brought an adverse international public reaction and that international public reaction is important, if not vital.

Caught in a frenzy of jingoism, with holy war overtones, the Arabs called for the extermination of a people, the total elimination of a state recognized by most other na-

The dividends from threats of holy war and genocide were meagre for the Arabian states. The only implication which could be read into such propaganda by other countries was that the Arabian allies had become isolated from world thought, that they had failed to understand international revulsion against genocide, and that holy wars do not carry a fraction of the influence they did during earlier centuries running back to the crusades and beyond.

This is valuable knowledge for the Arabs and any others who might wish to exploit these particular forms of emotionalism.

A New Look at Brentwood Sewers

THE METROPOLITAN HEALTH Board recommendation that swimming be banned off Brooks Park, near the Brentwood ferry wharf, emphasizes current Central. Saanich concern about pollution and spurs the decision to make a new survey of a possible sewer system for the municipality.

Pollution control authorities rejected the earlier proposal to pipe sewage farther out into Saanich Inlet. And since the existing septic tank system is proving inadequate in an area of population increase, the expensive alternative of building a sewer line across the peninsula to empty into Haro Strait must again receive attention.

The Haro Strait project was recent regional sewer report by engineering experts, but this was dependent on the growth of population in other parts of the Saanich Peninsula to help finance the undertaking. The latest population projections indicate an increase in inhabitants so rapid that the sewerage program, with modifications and strategic location of new housing subdivisions, may be feasible much sooner than had been expected.

The new Central Saanich survey will take note of these factors, and the Haro Strait plan could become a reality. In any case, it will be the eventual solution to the sewage problem of much of the peninsula. Temporary expedients could prove seen as the ultimate solution in the expensive in the long run.

A Tory Tack Back to Protection

THE Conservative party, under Mr. Diefenbaker's lame duck leadership, has apparently decided to make a Haturn back to more protectionist policies. Following his last week. Mr. Jack Irvine, a London businessman, described at greater length and even more sombre terms perils which the official Opposition now discerns on the Canadian horizon. While he did say, in ng moment of optimism, that he would be all for the Kennedy agreements if they turned out to be for the general good, his emphasis was upon possible detrimental effects; increased Japanese competition, the difficulties of shoe cturers, protection for firms likely to be "hard hit," the need of assistance for hard goods and soft goods, recent bankruptcies, the significance of tariff cuts superimposed on industrial wage increases, and so on.

"This is a very important step which has been taken," Mr. Irvine warned.
"When one considers the present inflationary tendencies in this country, he must see in this a most alarming

After another night of worry, Diefenbaker was back at it on Friday, Among the many persons who urging meetings with "The leaders of through the years have worked for business and industry that will be the improved facilities, Alderman affected by the wide ranging tariff cuts on imported materials, considering in particular the drastc effects on Canadian manufacturing and industry in textiles, plastics, chemicals, fine papers and now will become a reality. > He revealed an even deeper and 'Is the minister in a position to say what up two Indian diplomats. effect these reductions will have on making Canada even more subject to American control?"

All these forebodings are in startling contrast to Conservative views as expressed only last May when there was a spate of alarming stories about the possibe breakdown of the Geneva talks.

Thus on May 9, at the very beginning of the new session Mr. Fulton asked Mr. Winters whether he could say "if a breakdown is as imminent as seems likely from this morning's papers. If so, what initiative is the Canadian government taking to protect Canada's trade in wheat and other commodities?"

On the following day Mr. Diefenbaker deplored the inadequacies of the Speech from the Throne. "Why?", he sked. "is there no reference, except in a general way, to broadening ecomomic expansion? Why is there no reference to what Parliament will be asked to do in the event that the Kennedy Round of negotiations collapses - and I hope it will not. They have been talking for four years and now the various countries face an impasse."

Seeking Reassurance

Then on May 12, Mr. Diefenbaker again pleaded for reassuring news. "Now that the zero hour approaches in connection with the Kennedy Round of tariff negotiations in Geneva, is the prime minister in a position to give a report as to whether there is any hope or optimism that the deliberations will bring about the possibility of a substantial reduction in tariffs?"

Not satisfied with some words of comfort from Mr. Peason, the Conservative leader inquired whether the answer indicated "a roseate hope that there will be a dawn."

The dawn has come; the collapse that Mr. Diefenbaker feared has been averted; a substantial reduction tariffs has been achieved. But the Conservative gloom that preceded the dawn has changed only to thicken since the dawn-arrived.

How has the situation of our

It is an astonishing reversal. When the spectre of deadlock loomed, Mr. Diefenbaker's thoughts were concentrated on tariff reduction and economic expansion. Now that a massive breakthrough has been achieved (though a first step Quebec wished to take in its bargain which, even from the most harboiled negotiative standpoint, seems remarkably favorable to Canada), the Conservative leader has swung his party right around in the face of all the oncoming world traffic.

Why this startling change of direcsuggestion of politics in his progress, has been posed and it must be solved.

To Keep Identity

Premier Daniel Johnson took advan tage of the feast of St. Jean Baptiste to reaffirm Quebec's need to establish much closer relations with Frenchguage countries of the world.

It is a vital necessity to preserve our French cultural identity in a North American continent saturated with English influences. In effect, Quebec realizes today that external help must be added to its own internal action to protect its autonomy effectively. This is continuation of traditional policy adapted to changing circumstances.

Yet, in the remainder of the country and particularly in the Canadian capital, these new developments have not been above raising a good deal of fear. There was even talk of balkanization of the external affairs of our country, although Quebec's action is not aimed at the diplomatic sphere. Still others saw a march towards independence, despite the fact that Mr. Johnson and his colleagues have frequently repeated that what they wanted was to make the federal link more acceptable to their citizens.

Thus, as result of the conflicting interpretations which have been made of tion? Has Mr. Diefenbaker perceived a concrete gestures, we have reached a new economic light or is there a sort of an impasse. A serious problem

A Widening Sino-Burmese Rift

PEKING'S new diplomatic dictum that any mob wearing Mao in its buttonhole is right wherever it riots, is eginning to reap brusque responses.

Chanting Chinese, who have successfully besieged nine foreign missions in Peking, rampaged through Macao and Hong Kong, and littered the streets of capitals as far apart as Moscow, Paris and Baghdad in the course of their demonstrations have always been backed by sharp protests from their nt whenever local authority intervened. But, two weeks ago, nine members of the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi were injured by an engry crowd

Last week an official of the Chinese Embassy in Rangoon was stabbed to death within its precincts, while thousands surged through the Burmese capital, stoning and beating up any Chinese they could find. The began when Chinese state school pupils demonstrated against a Burmese government ban on wearing Mao Tse-tung badges, and was aggravated by Chinese adults in a car with diplomatic licence plates who distributed more Mao buttons and pamphlets among them.

Recently, furious Burmese tried to storm the walls of the Chinese Embassy. They were dispersed by troops and police, and martial law was imposed. China has not only served the usual indignant protest, however, but also

If this immediate and harsh condemnation is to be the beginning of the end break will have a special significance. For it will show that even faultless neutrality is not good enough for China.

always been determined by the disagreeable knowledge that Burma is a sprawling underdeveloped state of only about 22 million people which shares 1.200 miles of wild and remote frontier with the Chinese colossus to the north.

Bitterness in Rangoon

Communist China was solemnized by a treaty of mutual friendship and nonsion, signed during the piping days co-existence, followed by a honeymoon which began in 1960 when the two states successfully negotiated a complicated border treaty fixing their frontiers for the future—the first concluded with any power.

In January, 1961, China and Burma concluded an economic aid agreement under which Peking granted Rangoon a long-term interest-free loan of £30 million, to be used to buy Chinese plant and technical assistance for the struction of textile, sugar, plywood and paper factories, for irrigation schemes, bridge-building and the laying of a 265 mile highway in the northern Kachin. state. Last year it was estimated that accused the Burmese government of some 300 Chinese experts were working China also supplanted India as the chief importer of Burmese rice.

There have nevertheless been aspects of yet another beautiful friendship, the of the relationship between the Communists and the modern Union of Burma, one-time vassal of Chinese Emperors, that have caused faces to fall Rangoon's attitude toward Peking has in Peking or Rangoon. In 1950 Burma became unwilling host to several thousand Chinese Nationalist troops, loyal to President Chiang Kai-shek in Formosa, who retreated across the border from Yunnan when Mao's Red Army advanced to the frontier, and these have since carved themselves out a "protection" area which they dominate with their guns and exploit for its opium.

Then came refugees, disillusioned with the collective village life under Mao, slipping unobstructively into the millions of Burma's northern states and now fugitives from the Red Guards have in turn followed these. Burma's Chinese minority is now estimated to number more than a million-and among these even monks who reported that the Red Guards were persecuting them for their religion.

The Burmese, who are themselves devout Buddhists, are watching the Cultural Revolution with some appre-

Marriage of Convenience

On their side, officials in Rangoon bitterly, if privately, resent Peking's patronage of the leaders of the White Flag Communist Party, who enjoy asylum in the Chinese capital while their guerrillas continue to terrorize the Burmese countryside. Meanwhile under Burma's socialization program local Chinese who look to Peking for protection have lost their businesses or else their jobs under new laws that have barred non-Burmese from a number of key occupations. Only Burmese citizens may be teachers, and teaching in Chinese is forbidden.

Moreover, Burma's neutralism, once lauded as a perfect formula for smooth international relations, becomes progressively more rasping to China, like a fast-growing five o'clock shadow. It has prompted Ne Win to reject association even with those "peace-loving peoples of the world" who urged that the United Nations should be condemned as a tool of the imperialists, that the "new emerging forces" must be pitted against the oldestablished powers, and that the nuclear test ban treaty should not be signed (Burma signed). It toook Ne Win to both New Delhi and Washington last year and it also persuaded him rather pointedly to assure his anti-Communist neighbors in Bangkok recently that he would never allow Burma - with China to her north and Thailand to her south - to be used as an invasion route for an assault on their country.

Liberals' Fund Appeal Pattern for the Future?

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

The frank appeal for money by the Liberal Federation of Canada is not wound up, but it seems to have been a moderate success. One hundred and eighty thousand letters (forty-five thousand in French) went out to persons on con-stituency membership lists. Just short of $40,000 has received and the indicate that the total will be about $50,000. The costs of the form letters (paper and printing) and the mailing come to about $12,000. The regular staff at Liberal head quarters did the work. It is clear that a plus differential close to $40,000 is substantial and welcome. It's harder, if you are a Liberal, to be thrilled by what seems to be a numerical response of about two per cent. The appeal is almost certain to come a regular or annual project. This likelihood, and the clear fact that many political problems flow from the shaky and obsure nature of party finance, leads us to go into unusual detail in examing this drive.

We say "unusual." Because on the face of it $50,000 seem a bagatelle to a party which spends more than $200,000 annually for its headquarters' operation and which spent over half a million on national expenditures (not in constituencies) during the 1965 election. Such disparities mean that we must ask ourselves a question first. Are the Liberals honest and sincere in this appeal and not being merely gimmicky or run-ning a bluff to change their image?

It is our opinion that the appeal was straightforward and part of a deliberate effort to change the pattern of party support and to work up a different sense of responsibility

The letter was specific that there'd be no rewards "no pin — no membership card — personalized billfold."

President Nichol did not consult MPs or senators or provincial MPs beforehand and there's been no backlash from them. The general reaction of these people and other party activists has been favorable. However it is clear from Mr. Nichol's comments that few have thought deeply about the implications of this appeal or about the pending legislation which should follow the recent report of the committee on election expenses.

An unexpected bonus from the response to the appeal is being provided by the critical letters which tell the headquarters much about how the ordinary party member views the performances of the PM, the ministry, and the element in the response to fund-raising may be exceptionally valuable if there proves to be as we suspect there is, a likelihood that those who te feel they are entitled to speak their minds about the party.

While it is almost certain this kind of appeal will be put on an annual basis president Nichol is not sure whether future drives will have an organized follow-up. For example, a personal phone or house call from a constituency worker. Should there be an construency worker. Should there be an attempt to build up what the NDP calls "sustaining membership," that is persons who give regularly, usually through post-dated cheques beyond the normal membership fee?

Some of the recommendations of the practices of parties when they are introduced. John Nichol feels the most important changes would limit the extent of election spending. Once upper spending limits are blocked out, the ability of parties to set realistic budgets and bring their fund-raising out in the open will be much enhanced. Even greater help in these two areas will come if the new legislation follows the Quebec example and provides for the underwriting from government funds of certain spending by candidates, such as for a "mailing" or for broadcasting.

It is hazardous to predict developments in party organization but we see the Liberal appeal and its relative success as a first step in the establishment by one of the major parties of a national membership. Sooner or later this had to come as a support for a

Biologists Studying Problem of Feeding Four Billion People

By CHRISTINE DOYLE

LONDON - A world - wide organization of biologists has launched a five-year program of research into new ways of feeding a world population now growing at a frightening pace.

During this International Biological Program, hundreds could have fully of biologists from 48 countries, including Russia, America, the United Kingdon and Canada (but excluding China), will come to grips with the question of how an estimated 4,000 million mouths will find enough to eat

Scientists have been planning this all-out organization and method study of food re-sources for the past three

At about 2,000 million, the At about 2,000 million, the world population is now twice that of 150 years ago. Many biologists believe that governments must treat the tearnway rise as the most urgent "defence" problem of the next 10 years, or submit to e's own control by star-

Dr. Barton Worthington, a former fish biologist and now scientific director of IBP, explained: "Even if all govexplained: Even it an governments adopt disciplined family planning policies to-morrow, there will be two critical generations before the population explain really begins to leave off. gins to level off."

The rational management of natural resources is the aim of the biologists, who work in every conceivable environment. In the course of their studies of agricultural, marine and freshwater re-sources, and novel protein foods, some ingrained ideas and cherished domestic animals are likely to face a

On clearing a piece of jungle, for instance, the most productive replacement may ot be a herd of cows. The native antelope is probably better adapted to the environ-ment, and therefore more productive. The meat is good and the animal produces a "strong milk," which keeps

The transitional period need not be lengthy. "Already," said Dr. Worthington, "we know from comparing red deer — a Scottish home product — with sheep — mainly imported — that we could have fully productive herds within five years." The deer appears to be better adapted to the sparse conditions of Scotland's craggy hills and so may prove the be

The food-worthiness of wellstocked fisheries (still at an early development stage, but which are considered to be more fruitful than a comparable piece of land) will be extensively studied. In the tropics, such "fishponds" are likely to become an important source of high-quality food. The feasibility of "fields" of seaweed, "gardens" of unicellular algae, tapioca fermentation plants and man-made ponds of tiny marine animals will all be critically assessed. Even the peanut may make a

Leaves, once considered fit only for animal fodder, or not even considered, are expected to vield valuable high-protein foods on a mass scale. Already lucerne leaves are being processed in a high starvation area of India at a plant devised by Dr. N. W. Pirie, from the Rothamsted Experimental Station in Hertfordshire.

Dr. Worthington said,

"Over the five years we may spend about $60 million. But governments have not governments have not yet wakened to the gravity of this food crisis. With even 10 per cent of the amount that Britain alone spends on its

Another investigation is planned into the effect on marine life in the Mediterthe Nile draining into the Aswan Dam and irrigation schemes. Since this requires the co-operation of Israeli and Egyptian scientists, it may have to be shelved altogether.

Thus did civil engineer Marcus Smith record some of the perils of railway surveys in British Columbia 90 years ago. Smith was one of the men who pioneered construc-tion of the British Columbia section of the first Trans-

J. A. Mongrain (Ind.—Trois-Rivieres) said something has to be wrong with welfare programs when 3,500,000 Canadians were living ir poverty and widespread affluence. A recent study showed that 46.2 per cent of the population of Greater Monteal experienced hardship, poverty or privation.

Mail Sacks Float Down From Sky

MONTREAL (CP)—A helium-filled balloon with two men and 200,000 pieces of mail aboard travelled 50 miles from Verdun, a Montreal suburb, to Sutton, Que., Wednesday in what was described as the first airmail flight by balloon in Canada.

The letters carried by Wolfgang Gruber of Saltzburg, Austria, and Erich Markel of Augsburg, Germany, in their motorless air vehicle were stamped with special centennial stamps which the pair hoped would be valued at $2.00 by collectors by virtue of their having been carried in a "first" trip by a vehicle of this kind in

The pair came down in a field near Sutton and took their mail to the local post office for post-marking. Most of the stamps were of a special centennial issue bearing prints of various pavilions at Expo. It was stated on the letters that this was the on the letters that this was the first mail ever to be carried in Canada by powerless balloon.

The balloonists were originally bound for Sorel, Que., 35 miles to the northeast of Montreal, but a wind change brought them to Sutton to the so utheast instead—about 70 miles off course.

The balloon, pumped with $3,500 worth of helium gas, carried a heavy wicker basket beneath which measured about six feet in both length and width and four feet in depth and which bore the two-man crew.

PLAY ABOUT SEPARATISM GETS STANDING OVATION

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) -Gratien Gelinas' play about separatism in Quebec and the communication gap between old and young generations had its first English performance here Wednesday night.

The play, Yesterday the Children Were Dancing, was first produced in French in Montreal last spring. It is to run in repertory at the Charlottetown Festival all summer, alternating with Pierre Berton's new musical comedy Paradise Hill and a revival of Anne of Green day and Anne will be per-formed for the first time this year July 17.

Yesterday the Children Were Dancing is a contemporary dram ashout a Montreal lawyer suddenly given a long-desired chance to enter federal cabinet, only to find that his opportunity is blocked by his son who has been secretly organizing a separatist group.

PLAYS LEADING ROLE

Mr. Gelinas, long respected as a director, actor and playwright, plays the leading role with force, although at times his performance and the play tend to descend to the level of a political harangue.

However, at its best, the play is a well-constructed and Paradise Hill opened Monsometimes smoving presenta-tion of some arguments for and against the secession of Quebec from Canada.

The near-capacity audie in the 1,000-seat Confederation Memorial Theatre applauded warmly at the play's conclusion, and many stood in playwright-actor Gelinas and his fellow performers. The English translation of Yesterday the Children Were Dancing is by Mavor Morre, artistic director of the Charlottetown Festival.

Rioting 'Outdoor Sport'

CHICAGO (AP) - The student and teen-ager riots that have become annual events at some of the best known summer and winter resorts in the United States will continue and perhaps grow larger and spread to more places, a sociologist

Bernard Beck, assistant pro fessor of sociology, at Northwestern University, said in an interview that these youths gather at places where they are unknown with the avowed purpose of breaking out of their ordinary routine.

"A lot of the public's concern is that college students were once looked upon as special kinds of people who were ex-pected to act in a special way," Beck said.

"All that is changing," he added. 'Teen-agers are coming to regard themselves as ordinary people and they want the same autonomy and freedom that is allowed others."

Although he said there is considerable difference in scale, he compared the student uprisings with the antics of some conver tion delegates who block traffic and play practical jokes on usually without interference from the police.

If you happen to be the parent of a boy re-leased for his long vacation, the chances are that you have dealt by now with the ragged and filthy runners, the disreputable sweatshirt and gym shorts, the mismatched socks and the jumble of lesser gear junior brought home from school.

Then came the second argo, which consisted of a tape recorder, a record player and a badminton racquet.

Ron dumped these. He returned to his car for a camera, a guitar and our watering can, borrowed for use in a project designed to show how land erosion starts.

Some books, a couple of armloads, followed. Ron set these down on the last bit of free space.

"There," he told us. "That's it, except for our natural history exhibits. You'll be glad to know Bob's taking the tropical fish home for lifted the concrete box and looked underneath, scouting it carefully for cracks. The alligator, when he entered in his big glass aquarium, was lurking in the green murk of a rock cave.

Ron unwrapped the foil from a chunk of frozen steak and reached in to set it on the flat slab that roofed the cave. We noticed he didn't let his hand linger.

Presently three knobs appeared above the surface.
One was a snub nose, the other two periscopes that foused yellow eyes with vertical black slits. Behind, dimly, we could distinguish a sinister shape about 16 inches

"You have to be careful when you reach in," Ron said in pleased tones. "He bites." That was last week. The termites, I am glad to report, are behaving themselves, but the alligator has started to

Full Sails Set And Flags Flying, Pride of Fleet Sank

By HUMPHRY DAVY

On a summer evening, Aug. 10, 1628, the warship Wasa, the pride of the Swedish navy, was preparing to sail on her maiden voyage from Stock-holm harbor.

But disaster fell. A sudden squall struck the Wasa. She heeled and turned turtle, sinking to the bottom of the harbor with full sails set and flags flying.

A quarter of her crew of nearly 200 men went down

By PENNY SAVER

Victoria has something new to offer every day, it seems, and little concentrated exploring can lead to all sorts of discoveries. A "know Victoria" campaign was in order, I decided, after both offspring and spouse (unobservant at the best of times) informed me that my knowledge of the city in which I was born and raised was sadly wanting. . . . not to mention my lack of interest in the unusual and "fun" things which are becoming popular with every age group. So I made a point of looking into the places which we tend to leave to the tourist. The result was the discovery of a boutique featuring everything from "pop" art puzzles to a unique line of fashions.

I often find myself stuck for a last-minute birthday present and on those odd occasions when a gift is in order, I'm usually reduced to a state of panic. But this store has solved the problem with a marvellous variety of novelty items suitable for young and

UN Tries to Reach Mideast Consensus

UNITED NATIONS -Sobered by its failure to approve any major recom-mendation in the Middle East crisis, the General Assembly Wednesday night agreed to a one-week recess in an attempt to patch together a rudimentary consensus.

CLAIMS SESSION USEFUL

One hope now is that the interval will permit accord on a new general resolution referring the issue back to the Security Council, asking the secretary general to send a special representative to con-fer with the Arabs and Israelis, and urging restraint by all parties.

Assembly president Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghan-istan said Tuesday was "the saddest day in the history of the United Nations."

But Pazhwak appeared to recover his composure in Wednesday afternoon's session, devoted to speeches in explanation of votes.

Rebuking "skeptics and critics who too readily find a dubious consolation in the inconclusive battle of the resolutions," he said the session had nevertheless been

MONTREAL (CP) - The fabulously rich Aga Khan dropped into Expo 67 for a fast three-hour visit Tuesday and had to buy a one-day en-try ticket like anybody else. He arrived on a helicopter in mid-afternoon and left on it at about 6:80 p.m.

A spokesman at the helicopter landing point on La Ronde said the Khan looked amused when he was asked for $2.50 for the entry ticket. The Khan pulled out a large handful of $1,000 and $100 bills before were scattered over the site. "Now we're building another five washrooms at a cost of about $90,000. We're also tackling the problem of the signs directing people to the toilets.' Three of the new toilets will be on Notre Dame Island, one on St. Helen's Island and one on La Ronde amusement

The black ink symbols used by Expo to indicate men and women's toilets so far appear to have confused rather than enlightened.

The tiny signs were the only indication of which was which and a lot of people made the wrong deduction. Shrieks from outraged wrong one or who saw bamboozled men stepping into their domain were a regular feature of the early days of the fair.

Now a new symbol has been designed which makes it easier to tell who should go where and how "We have a three-feetsquare sign which goes on the outside wall of the washrooms and a one-foot-square one which goes on the door of the toilets," said the spokesman.

"Also we have seven-feet-tall, three-feet-wide signs which have arrows pointing to the washrooms, one-footsquare symbols for men and nen and the words toilette

The idea of advertising toilet f a c i lities previously was thought out of place in the gleaming, tidy showplace of Man and His World.

The decision to increase the toilet facilities was delayed for weeks by arguments about who should make the final decision and whether addi-tional toilets really were necessary.

While visitors queued for admission to, or hunted for, the elusive white buildings, some Expo architects were adamantly stating that no more were necessary.

Expo engineers prepared full specifications and drawings for new facilities which were prompity shelved.

Now the new toilets and signs are going up and visitors to the second half of Expo's six-month run will get the benefit.
Robert Winters, federal minister of trade and com-merce, was seen Wednesday touring the fair grounds with Robert Shaw, Expo's deputy commissioner-general.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

CHANNEL CHIT CHAT: B.C. Lions' general manager Denny Veltch and Victoria Cablevision manager Les Curran are carrying on negotiations to provide Victoria with live, closed circuit telecasts of the Lions' home league games.

Veitch said the step is being taken because Victoria fans are taking a greatly increased interest in Lions CFL games. The talks are being held on the basis of coverage of at least seven of the B.C. home league games. ABC-TV has a documentary about Russia's Red Army destined to start filming at the end of the month. The Soviets have been more freely permitting American network television cameras behind the Iron

30 . . . Shane may not have made it as a television series but the western character will get a full blown movie airing next season. The original movie with Alan Ladd is in ABC-TV's movie book. NBC has "Tom Jones" ready for showing.

Cartoonist Al Capp has been approached for his permission to allow producer Sheldon Leonard to produce a Li'l Abner series for the '68-'69 series. Leonard is stoking up NBC-TV interest too 's Montreal actress Genevieve Bujold will make her U.S. television debut as "Saint Joan" in the Hall of Fame's version of the Shaw classic next season.

CBS-TV's Wild, Wild West will take on a slightly different look next season. The program series, starring Robert Conrad and Ross Martin, is dropping fantasy and have less reliance on gimmicks. The fewer gimmicks are a result of the dying trend in spy series.

Would you believe Rudy Vallee, Dina Merrill, Greer Garson and Ethel Merman are teed up for Batman appearances next season? Believe it . . . Cornel Wilde has made his first television deal with Screen Gems to produce, direct and act in a new adventure series to be shot in the Bahamas. It's a pirate piece.

Are the clouds moved by the spinning of the earth?

It seesm reasonable to suppose that the spinning earth creates a whirling draft, strong enough to move the airy atmosphere and its flocks of floating clouds. But this simple idea does not explain the facts, Experts say that clouds are moved by the interaction of several complicated forces.

deflects, or bends, the weathery events to the right above the Northern Hemisphere and to the left above the Southern Hemisphere. The speeding equator ahead and lines diminishing speeds lag behind through latitudes farther north and south. The spinning earth adds a global pattern to all objects moving about it. North of the equator, the Coriolis effect bends global winds and local storm, bullets and baseballs to the right. South of the equator, it gives a leftward bend to all objects moving above the spinning surface.

The spinning earth, then, does not waft the clouds around in a whirling draft. But it does play a role, a double role, in the motion of clouds above its rotating surface. The formation of cloudy winds is very complex, for air masses rise and sink and start out in all directions. But when formed, the spinning earth draws them into planetary patterns in the opposite hemispheres.

It starts with him flying from Montreal, where he is playing at the Queen Eliza-beth hotel, to attend a dinner for young Canadians given by Queen Elizabeth.

The upshot is that the Ottawa-raised comedian entertains Queen Elizabeth, is entertained by Queen Elizabeth, then finds himself due to entertain at the Queen Eliza-

House at 8 p.m. night and wows the Queen with his famous imitation of Prime Minister Pearson, who incidentally, stands laughing near the reception line.

He finishes off with an imi-

GENEVA (Reuters) Canada today called on the great powers to help stop the arms race in the Middle East and other areas of international tension.

Recent events had shown how a worsening situation in one region could threaten a clash between the major powers who supplied the area with arms, said Canada's chief disarma-ment delegate, Gen. E. L. M.

He told the 17-nation disarmament conference he supports President Johnson's recent pro-posal that the UN ask its members to report all shipments of arms to the Middle East.

But Gen. Burns, first commander of the UN Emergency Force in the Middle East, added that he thought the president's proposal should be made appli-cable to other areas also.

Douglas Eyes New Canada Role

TORONTO (CP)-NDP Leader Douglas said today his party wants to develop an independent role for Canada. In a windup speech to the party's national convention, he d the party is not anti-American, nor anti-anybody. He accused the Pearson administration of "an abject surrender" of the sovereignty of a free people to the United States through American economic domination.
